Explanatory note to editors – PLEASE READ FIRST

- This study looks at both public and private market funds at the global, European and Luxembourg level.
- Public market funds invest in traditional instruments such as fixed income and equities, and can be distributed to both retail and institutional investors.
- Private market funds are investment vehicles that pool capital to invest in non-publicly traded assets, such as private equity, real estate, infrastructure, or private debt.
- Funds of funds are excluded from the analysis in order to avoid double counting. Moreover, when referring to public market figures, money market funds are also excluded, given that their capacity for material sustainability integration is restricted by their short-term, high-liquidity nature.
- Regarding the European and Luxembourg figures for public market funds, the analysis takes into account UCITS (for EU jurisdictions) and their equivalent (for non-EU jurisdictions). As for European and Luxembourg data on private market funds, the figures include all private market funds that invest in private equity, private debt, infrastructure and real estate.
- As a result, the total figures presented for these markets might not reflect their full size or match other sources, given that certain types of funds are excluded from the analysis.

Press release, Luxembourg, 20 March 2026.

ALFI and LSFI, in collaboration with PwC Luxembourg, publish “Sustainable Finance in Europe and Luxembourg 2025: Navigating recalibration”

Sustainable finance has come a long way since 2020, evolving from a period marked by regulatory uncertainty to one of greater maturity and clarity. Despite recent regulatory recalibrations, Europe stands at the forefront of this shift, driven by pioneering regulations and reinforced climate commitments. As the second largest investment fund domicile in the world, Luxembourg stands out as a key hub in the sustainable finance landscape.

While challenges persist, sustainability is becoming integral to financial decision-making. Luxembourg is continuously adapting to maintain its leadership through close-knit collaboration with all relevant stakeholders in the Luxembourg financial centre.

Nicoletta Centofanti, CEO of the Luxembourg Sustainable Finance Initiative (LSFI), commented:

“The need for sustainable finance not only persists but is intensifying, as it serves as a key driver of resilience and long-term value creation. Beyond addressing environmental and social challenges, sustainable finance strengthens the robustness and stability of financial systems, enhancing their capacity to withstand global shocks stemming from climate change, governance gaps and increasing social issues, and the long-term risks these challenges pose to economic stability and prosperity. In this evolving landscape, Luxembourg has firmly positioned itself as a leading international financial centre for sustainable finance. Going forward, measurement and high-quality data are key enablers of clarity, comparability, and confidence across jurisdictions and market segments. Through this research, we aim to support the financial industry by providing insights to advance the sustainable finance journey.”

Serge Weyland, CEO of ALFI, added:

“Sustainable finance remains a key pillar of the European asset management industry. Recent reviews of sustainability rules are a welcome opportunity to ensure that the framework delivers real impact rather than unnecessary complexity. The industry has an important role to play in supporting the transition to a more sustainable economy, but this requires clear, workable rules combined with leeway for innovation. With its strong expertise in cross-border fund structuring and its leading position in public and private markets, Luxembourg is uniquely positioned to help channel global capital toward sustainable and transition investments.”

Geoffroy Marcassoli, Partner and Sustainability Assurance Leader at PwC Luxembourg, said:

“Although the Omnibus ‘simplification’ measures suggest a scaling back from previous regulatory ambitions, the asset management industry continues with its commitment. The emphasis is increasingly placed on robust data, measurable sustainability achievements, and enduring resilience. Luxembourg’s influential position within the European sustainable finance landscape continues to drive progress, guaranteeing that sustainability remains a fundamental strategic focus as frameworks such as the SFDR evolve.”

Note to Editors:

The Luxembourg Sustainable Finance Initiative (LSFI) and the Association of the Luxembourg Fund Industry (ALFI) decided to join forces and, with the support of PwC Luxembourg’s Global AWM & ESG Research Centre, prepared the present study, which builds on previous research efforts carried out.

By using Morningstar’s data and proprietary analysis of sustainable funds, this study provides a comprehensive analysis of the asset management industry at the global, European and Luxembourg levels. It highlights how sustainable finance is gradually becoming more ingrained within the industry’s traditional and private assets segments, amidst a more challenging political and regulatory context.
